Ship Matches -

Ship Matches are a traditional Swedish company with their origins in the early 20th century, and in that time their design has changed very little. Matches are a very traditional product but there is no reason why they have to look traditional. This was in part a brand update as well as being a challenge of sorts to create an interesting aesthetic on an incredibly small surface.

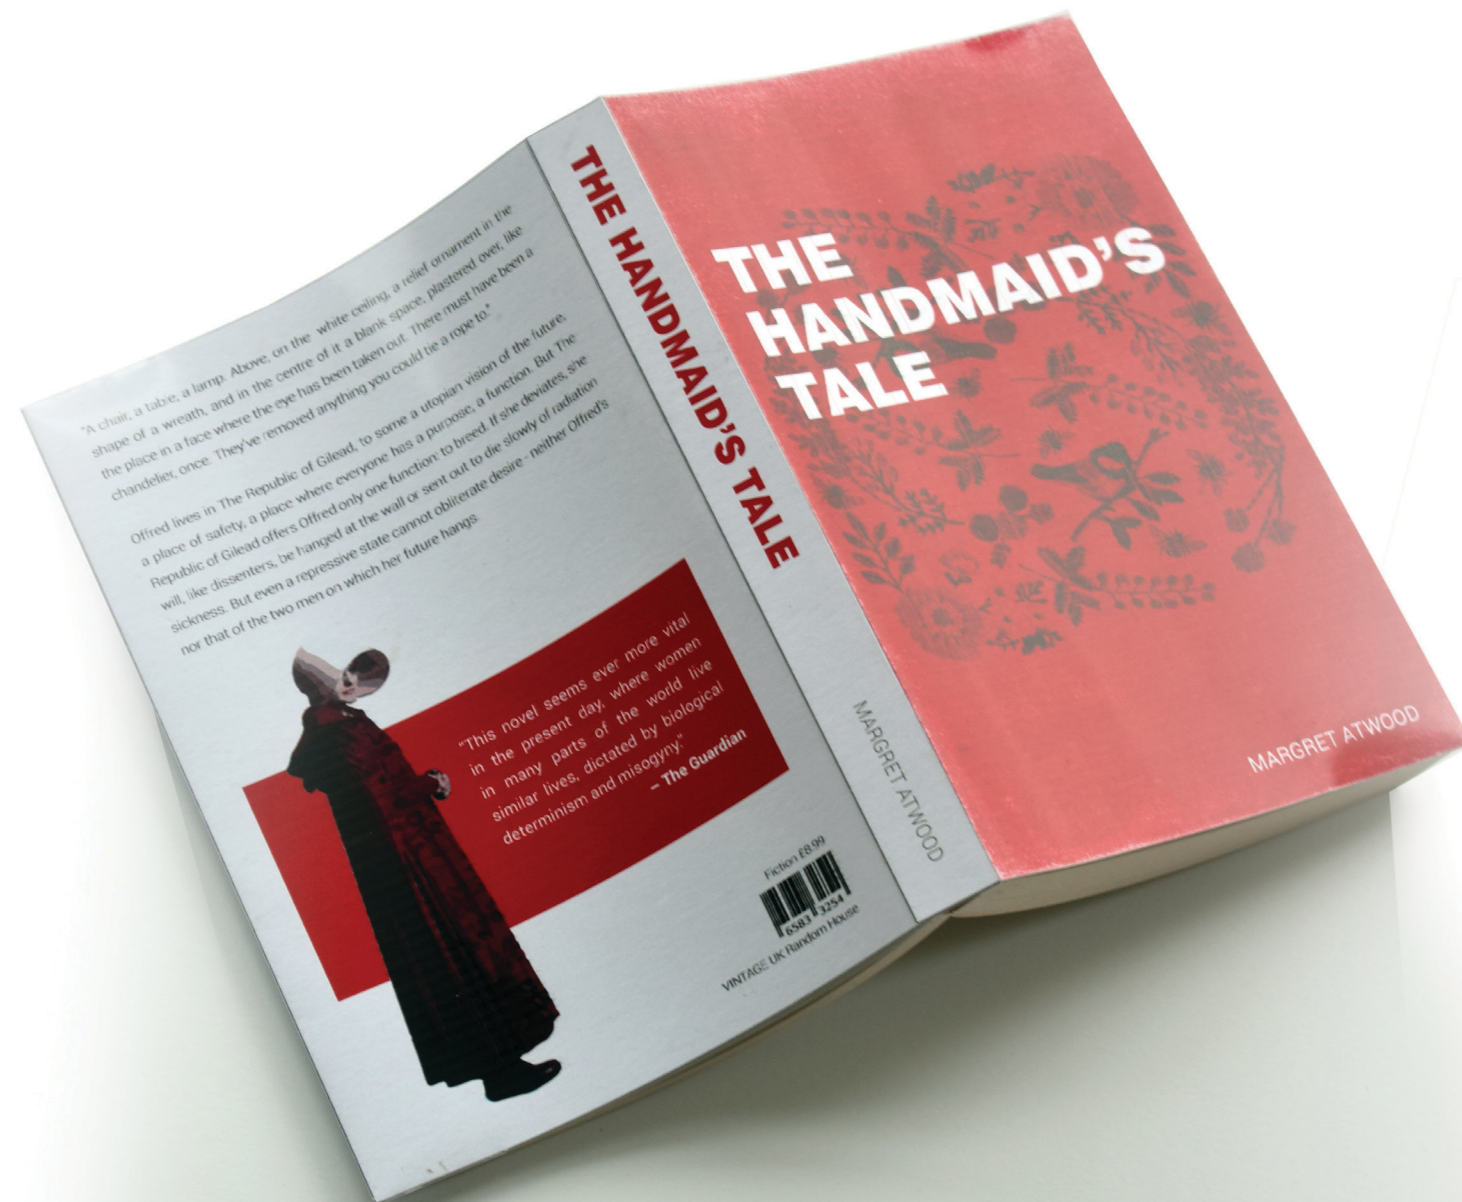

The Windup Girl Illustration –

Illustration made for the novel The Windup Girl by Paolo Bacigalupi:

A pair of genetically altered elephants provides the main power source for the factory; they walk endless circles to keep the production line running. This early morning scene shows the workers preparing for the start of the day.

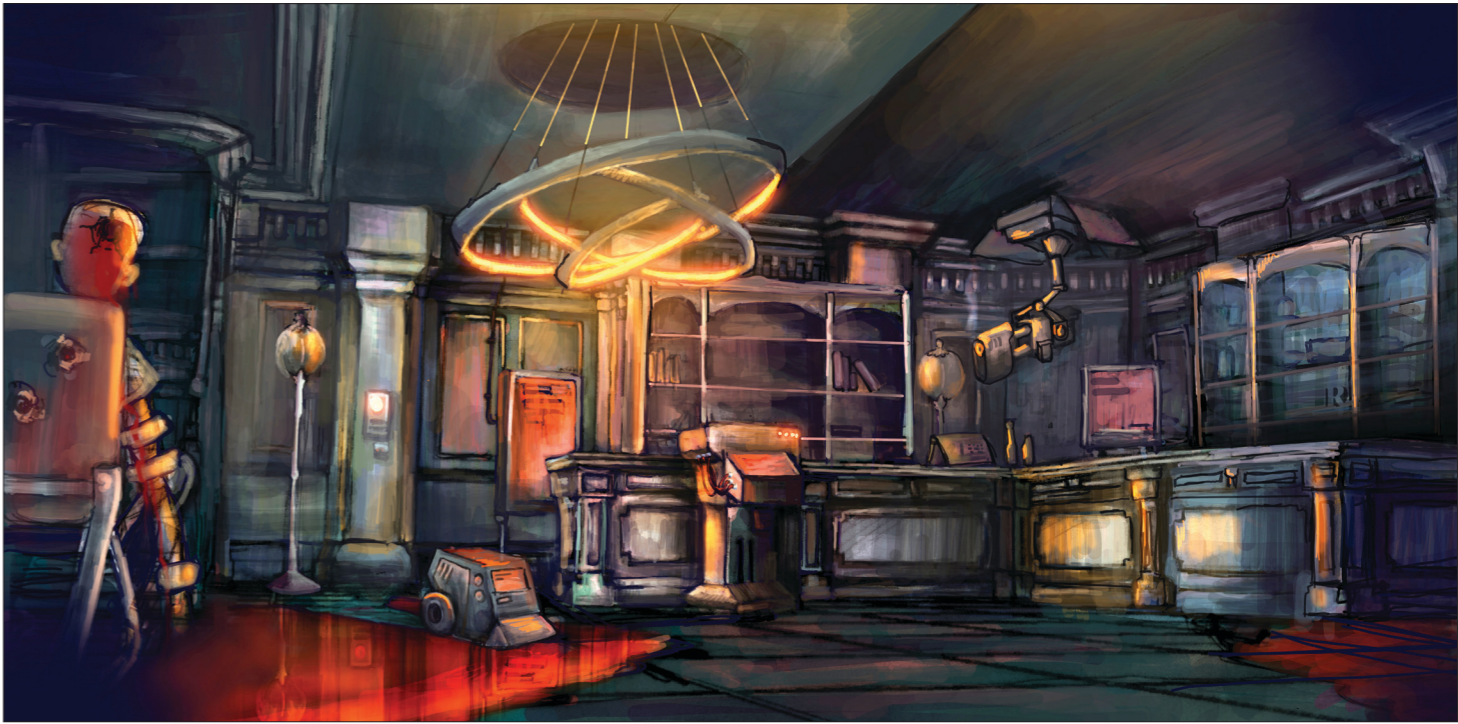

The Handmaid's Tale -

The dystopian novel written by Margret Atwood in 1985 has gained a new found popularity with the recent Hulu TV adaptation. The paperback version of the book still has the original cover which as one would expect appears quite dated. The brief was to update the book so that it was more in line with the advertising for the Hulu show and to give it a more modern feeling.

Speedy Diner Concept Illustration -

The Speedy Diner sits in a forgotten corner of the lobby. The automated bar and food ordering system sits in a state of partial repair as its insides are scattered across the room.

Winter Cycling Congress -

The Winter Cycling Congress is an annual event that gathers hundreds of experts from every corner of the globe to discuss the opportunities for the cycling mobility in the cold climate cities as well as building and supporting year-round cycling infrastructure and promoting cycling culture in the northern countries. The task was to create a logo for the 2018 event held in Moscow; an added challenge of this task was that the logo needed to be in both English and Russian.
